The science of chemistry, like that of geography, has its undiscovered North Pole. Four hundred and sixtyone degrees below the freezing point of the Fahrenhelt thermometer (-274 degrees C,) lies a mysterious, specially indicated degree of cold, which science has long been gazing toward and striving to attain, wondering meanwhile what may be the conditions of matter at this unex. plored point. Its existence has long been indicated and its position established in two different ways, viz., the regularly diminishing volumes of gases and the steady failing off in the resistance made by pure metals to the passage through them of electricity under increasing degrees of cold. This point, to which both these processes tend as an ultimate, is called the zero of ab-clute temperature. By more than one eminent observer it is supposed to be the temperature of interstellar space, the normal temp-ratu e of the universe. Whether or not this supposition be correct, the efforts which have been made and are still in progress to reach this degree of cold have been many, diverse and ingenious; the equipment of the explorer being not boats, conchinery of ice exploration, but all the varied resources of mechanics ing harmlessly from pegs and hooks. and of chemistry which can be combined to compass the extremest de-Clure's Magazine.

Steam Engines on Highways.

There are now more than 8,000 steam engines used for transport service on highways in Great Britain. The fact was stated by Lleut-Col. Templer, at the Royal United Service lastitution, some days ago, in a lecture advocating the use of steam transport for army purposes. He No L'w's Topicka said that extensive experiments had shown that a train of wagons can, on the best roads, make but fifteen to twenty miles a day, while a traction engine can transport the same train sixty to seventy miles a day, and at on, day after day, under all circumstances. The 8,000 engines mentioned are, of course, used for a great variety of work, mainly about farms, tesides simple transport There are MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But not withstanding this fact it is not generally k nown that the seat of life is located in the upper rest of the Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or man the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is nomembered that a serious injury to the spinul cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the parious organs which they supply with nerve force.

Two-thirds of chrould diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a durangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the treve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIM MILES, the celebrated specialist has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained to the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, distiness, duriness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, oplicipey. St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused.
